Genesis10 Opens Second Office in Troy, Mich. and is Hosting a Job Fair after Revising Job Creation Estimates through its Delivery Centers to 550 from 300 for 2011

Troy, Mich. (June 3, 2011) – Genesis10, a New York-based business and technology firm with 18 offices across the United States, has opened a second location in Troy, Mich. and is holding a job fair on Wednesday, June 8 and Thursday June 9. The job fair will be held at 900 Tower Drive, Suite 180 from 3 p.m. to 8 p.m. on both dates.

Genesis10 will be hiring people to fill a variety of roles including, but not limited to project managers, software engineers, data management experts and other technology professionals. For more information about the upcoming job fair, visit www.genesis10.com.

Genesis10 has created approximately 150 jobs in less than one year with the potential of adding an additional 100 jobs to the area. "The quality and availability of highly-skilled technology professionals is critical to our ability to help our clients flex, adapt and surge their workforce capacity on-shore," said Glenn Klein, Genesis10's president and chief financial officer. "After evaluating various locations, we chose the state of Michigan and the city of Troy for both offices because of the high caliber talent and technology expertise makes this a very attractive location."
